At Hyundai we're involved in a whole nest of activities. Varied activities that keep us busy from construction and engineering to shipbuilding, industrial plants, machinery, automobiles and trade. And recently Hyundai has expanded into the hi-tech electronics field of tomorrow.

How have we been able to successfully expand into all these areas? Well, our consistent business philosophy has been strictly conformed to, in all our pursuits. Simply, all Hyundai companies insist on hiring the best people, doing the job better and faster than the competition, and aiming at complete customer satisfaction. Our customers appreciate it and we demand it.

In addition, Hyundai's different business lines conform to each other and at the same time offset each other to produce a harmonious balance. But according to people with knowledge of the special prosecutor's investigation, Mr. Walsh and his staff feel strongly that the president should not undermine the nearly year-old investigation by pardoning the chief suspects and that the case should be permitted to go to trial, where the full story could come out.

Pardons for Colonel North and Admiral Poindexter have been repeatedly compared to the pardou granted to Richard Nixon after he resigned the presidency in 1974. In an enormously unpopular act, President Gerald R. Ford issued his "full, free and absolute" pardon to Mr. Nixon for his role in the Watergate scandals.

Many political analysts say the pardon cost Mr. Ford the next election, and recent polls suggest that, in the Iran-contra affair, the public may not approve of pardons. Because Mr. Reagan cannot seek Medicare, the U.S. government medical insurance for retired people, does not cover Americans living abroad. And depending on their age, it is sometimes difficult to get private international health insurance.

To help Americans who do not have health insurance through an employer, as well as people who retired abroad, the Association of Americans Resident Overseas, a Paris-based organization, has introduced a group medical insurance plan open to members and their dependents living in Europe.

The plan covers hospitaliza-don and outpatient costs, as well as costs for returning home for emergency health care if the subscriber is traveling. It has no age limit for joining and guarantees that subscribers will be covered for the rest of their lives.

Help Eastern Europe

For decades, East Europeans who wanted reforms found the Soviet Union standing in the way. Now Moscow takes the lead and beckons, while Eastern Europe's leaders balk. Their economies are in crisis, their people dispirited. Most leaders are old or ailing, and to them the future looks uncer-tain and reform risky. The West typically heeds Eastern Europe only in crisis. This is a good time to break that pattern with a thoughtful, unified approach to nudge inevitable changes in desirable directions.

Mikhail Gorbachev is trying to shape those changes along the lines of his own policies in the Soviet Union. He prods his East European cohorts toward economic reforms and reassures them of continued support. Moscow needs to revitalize these neighboring economies to help its own, es-pecially as markets for Soviet goods.

But economic cures require political change — which is risky in the Soviet Union and riskier still for governments lacking nationalist legitimacy. Orthodox East European parties have responded to Mr. Gorbachey's call for reform with caution and "a nationalist approach to socialism." This translates differently in each country. Poland, led by Wojciech Jaruzelski, who is relatively young at 64, was forced toward reform early. It has a strong church, dissident and labor groups and an underground press. Its economic difficulties are worse than Moscow's. Reform proposals require drastic price increases. To win support, General Janzelski proposes a referendum on Nov. 29. Opponents call for a boycott, saying that the reforms stop short of democratization.

Hungary, once socialism's success story. has the bloc's highest per capita foreign debt. Janos Kadar, 75, who led his country away from centralized planning, seems un-able to effect further reforms. With living standards down and social tensions up, the Communist Party is in disarray.

Bulgaria has launched a reform program of its own, but that is more tinkering than real change in central management. Czechoslovakia adamantly resisted re-forms, for good reason. Gustav Husak, 74, came to power in the wake of the Soviet invasion that crusbed the Czechoslovak reforms of 1968. But a sagging economy has forced him finally to propose broad changes, with details to come soon.

East Germany has been the most prosperous of the Soviet satclites. Its leader, Erich Honecker, 75, notes this when be rejects Moscow's model. His idea of reform is to tighten central planning. He bas done so with relative success, with belp from West Germany's favorable trade practices. Now there is pressure to improve technology so as to maintain exports to the West and satisfy Soviet needs.

Romania is virulently anti-reformist. Nicolae Ceausescu, 69 and ailing, answers economic distress with more repression and austerity. Romanians recently took to the streets in violent protest. They inquire plainuvely about Soviet reforms. But when Mr. Gorbachev came to explain them, Mr. Ceausescu could only stare at his watch.

The power structure in most of these countries cannot last much longer. Its stability, resting heavily on economic health, is threatened. Moscow, needing the more advanced technological and industrial capabilities of its allies, pushes gently and pro-mises more political breathing room.

This is space the West can use. A coordinated Western approach can increase broadcasting, cultural exchanges, travel and business contacts. It can also require of Eastern Europe more rational economic policies in return for reduced trade quotas and steppedup credits and investments. Such an approach could stimulate economic progress, as well as political and social reform,

America's Wealth Gap

Incomes have become more unequal in the United States in the past decade. The poor have become poorer since the middle 1970s, and the rich richer. That trend has been apparent for some time. Now the Congressional Budget Office has published a study showing that the federal tax system has simultaneously become less progressive. Tax rates bave risen for the poor and middle classes, while declining sharply for the top tenth of the population. Congress tried to change the balance for the better in the income tax reform bill last year, and the income tax is fairer now than it was. But those improvements have been swamped by the increasing Social Security tax and the other payroll taxes that pay for social insurance. While legally an employce pays only half of the Social Security tax and the employer pays the rest, the economic reality — as the CBO observes — is that, directly or indirectly, the employee bears all of it. Counted that way, four-fifths of all corporate income and excise taxes, to measure their impact on individuals. While there is more than one way to calculate these burdens, the general pattern is beyond argu-ment. The average effective rate of all the federal taxes together is the same as it was 10 years ago. But their weight has shifted signifcantly, to the advantage of the 20 percent of the population with the highest incomes. For nearly everyone else, poor through uppermiddle, total tax rates are now higher.

The shift toward greater inequality in American incomes began well before the Reagan administration, and some of it is due to demographic change. The increasing num-ber of families headed by women increases the poverty of people at the bottom of the income ladder, while the increasing number of two-income families benefits those on the upper rungs. But some of the change directly reflects public policy. In its assessment of Mr. Reagan's record at the end of his first term, the Urban Institute found that the spending cuts had reduced the incomes mainly of the poor, while the tax cuts had raised the incomes mainly of the more affluent. Those conclusions still hold true. While the growing distance between rich and poor did not begin with the Reagan administration, the poblics of the past six automatic antipage . -

East Europeans Are Watching Gorbachev

By Jeri Laber

N EW YORK - Mikhail Gor-baehev sent a strong signal to Eastern Europe when he said that "unity does not mean identity and uniformity." This more flexible ap-proach also tacitly acknowledged the very real differences that already exist within the bloc.

During a visit 1 made recently to Czechoslovakia and Poland. I asked opposition leaders about the effects glasnost. Czechoslovaks said bitterly that the new Soviet policies seemed to have passed them by. Poles were so involved in discussing the reforms now being introduced in their country that they barely mentioned Mr. Gorbachev.

Both countries have long-estab-Solidarity in Poland. But there the resemblance ends. Since 1968, when Soviet-led Warsaw Pact troops crushed a reform movement in Czechoslovakia known as the Prague spring, the Czechoslovak government has exercised light control over its population, arresting, isolating and ostracizing dissenters. Poland, despite government efforts to suppress the Solidarity movement, remains the freest coun-try in the Eastern bloc, with an active and independent Roman Catholic Church and a population known for its ineverent, irrepressible spirit. The contrast between the two countries is especially vivid now. The Polish government has embarked on a series of economic reforms, promising the partial introduction of market economics, private and cooperative ownership and worker selfmanagement. It is also promising "democratization," allowing an unusual degree of free discussion in the official press and liberalizing pass-port policies. "We're 10 years ahead of the Russians," a Solidarity leader told me. "The reforms are because of Solidarity, not Gorbachev." Some even suggested that "Gorbachev is because of Solidarity."

PARIS - Assessing the Soviet military threat to

P Europe is not so simple as it ought to be. Every major Western government goes about the matter in a different way. An agreed NATO force comparison has been blocked since 1984 because of a trivial and absurd Greek-Turkish quarrel over accounting for Greek forces on one Aegean island. The United States publishes an annual force comparison which its allies find more than a trifle propagandistic.

Threat assessment is basic to policy assessment, but policy assessment all too often works backward to influence the assessment of the threat. If you like the looks of Mikhail Gorbachev you may be inclined to see Soviet forces on the central front as less threatening than if you think that his steel teeth (as Andrei Gromyko described them) are a better indi-cation of his political personality than his nice smile.

A useful contribution to the debate has now been made by the Committee on Defense Questions and Many see an uncertain future for Solidarity, which has lost momen-tum, especially since Poland's political prisoners - whose fate had united the opposition — were freed in September 1986 in a general amacs-ty. The government has further cut the ground from under Solidarity by adopting or promising to adopt, many of the economic and social policies advocated by the Solidarity leadership. Solidarity leaders are now seeking new ways to remain a meaningful force within the society without letting themselves be compromised by the government. Confused and wary, they are also flushed with the excitement of the moment.

In Prague, however, nothing has changed. Charter 77 leaders described their high hopes before Mr. Gorbachev s visit to Czechoslovakia, and their disappointment when the visit did not result in any changes in leadership or policies. The Husak government has made it explicit that government - anti-reformists put in power by Soviet troops - will do anything that might undermine its Czechoslovakia will follow its own path, distinct from that of the Soviet Union. At one point, Mr. Gorbachev's speeches were censored in the

It is reasonable to assume that in the most repressive East European countries — Bulgaria, Romania, Czechoslovakia — there are many like him who are closely watching the involving people whose names are not known abroad. On Oct. 22, while I was in Prague, three well-known Charter 77 leaders were subjected to intensive house searches by the police, the first such searches in three Soviet experiment, waiting for a time when they, like their Polish neigh-bors, can begin to think of taking their future into their own hands. years; their writings and books were confiscated, together with "criminal instruments" such as typewniters. # Walesa on Gorbachev: 'We React the Same Way...

F ROM a meeting of Solidarity leaders in Gdansk on Oct. 21 emerged the formally unanimous decision, finally announced on Oct. 26, to boycon the Nov. 29 referendum on proposed economic and political re-forms. During a break in the meeting, Lech Walesa was surprisingly open-minded. "We are still trying to understand," be said. "A referendum in an East European country is a riddle. In principle we are in favor, but of course it depends on whether we can trust the results." Later he decided to sign the boycott declaration, probably in order to preserve the unity of Solidarity.

preted as surrender to a government which has out-lawed Solidarity. On the other hand, the boycott exposes Solidarity leaders to the risk of not being part of a rocess that might lead the country to stability.

Referendums are unusual in Communist countries. Did Mr. Walesa see a "Gorbachev effect"? "Certainly," he said, "hut the economic factor remains the most important. We live in a system which is outdated, ineffective and unproductive. We have to reform it without violence. Then maybe we will no longer be considered the beggars of Europe. And in that light we are looking with interest at what Gorbachev is doing. The problem is that one man alone cannot fight the system: all his initiatives are blocked by the bureaucracy. know that everything he says is absolutely necessary But I wonder if we can reform our system without violence. We and Gorbachev are trying to do that." Surprised that he saw a link between himself and Mr.

Gorbachev, I asked if they had goals in common. "We react the same way to the same problems," Mr. Walesa said. "We realize that our system is useless. We want economic efficiency, which is impossible without politi-cal pluralism. As you can see, it is a vicious circle."

Was he optimistic about the future of reform? "The only doubt I have," be said, "is whether we will do it with or without violence. But I am sure we will reform the system. There is no other solution unless some big shots can still be found in the West willing to donate $20 billion every year to Poland." — Jas Gawronski, who visited Gdarsk to interview Lech Walesa for Italy's Canale 5 television, contributed this to the International Herald Tribune.

A Cooler Assessment of the Soviet Military Threat The Warsaw Pact has a two-to-one advantage over NATO in tanks. But 34 percent of American main battle tanks are modern, manufactured in the 1980s, and 41 percent of the total NATO tank force consists of 1980s models. The Soviet tank comparable to the modern American M-1 makes up only 3 percent of the Warsaw Pact total. And only 24 percent of all the Warsaw Pact's tanks have been manufactured since 1970.

Nearly half the total Warsaw Pact tank deploy-ment - 23,000 out of 46,200 tanks - are 1940s model T-54s and T-55s. NATO has no tank that old in service. The WEU committee says, "NATO scraps its old tanks, or sells them to third countries; the Warsaw Pact keeps its in service." NATO has some 17,000 modern, optically-guided anti-tank missiles deployed. The comparable Soviet missile is only now coming into service outside the Soviet army itself. The report says that from "com-

Nicaragua is tough because it has had a revolution. Paradoxically, that is its potential saving grace. The Nicaraguan people dispute the second, Sandinist revolution, but most of them accept the first, anti-Somoza one. Somewhere in between the first and second revolutions may lie terrain on which Nicaraguans can at least con-tend politically, even if they cannot reach harmony. This is the premase that current peace efforts are testing. El Salvador is tough for prense A the opposite reason: It has not had a revolution. But although U.S. policy has kept the Duarte government afloat and seen success by some measures, overail it has been a failure. A cruel guernila thas been a failure. A crue guernita challenge persists, the people suffer, the economy is a wreck and democra-cy probably could not survive U.S. disengagement. For the first time in the bistory of U.S. foreign aid, aid to El Salvador this year ($603 million) exceeds a country's own contribution to its budget (SS82 million). Senator Mark Hatfield, a Republican, and Representatives Jim Leach, an Iowa Republican, and George Miller, a California Democrat, cite this somber fact in a report to the congressional Arms Control and Foreign Policy Caucus entitled "Bankroll-Failure: United States Policy in E-Salvador and the Urgent Need for Reform." Blaming the doubly embattled Duarte government for most of El Salvador's woes and suggesting an aid squeeze in the name of reform, the report amounts to opening a second front against El Salvador's frail democracy. It cannot be taken seriously. But the report is a telling reminder Americans are still furiously debating the nature of the Sandinist regime and its intent in regard to the Arias peace plan, but surely that question has been settled conclusively by the photos that appeared after the opening of the party congress in Moscow. In them, Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua can be seen sitting next to Erich Honecker of East Germany and Wojciech Jaruzelski of Poland, in the section reserved for the leaders of Leninist governments in good standing.

Soviet rituals continue to serve as very precise political indicators. Just as we would know at once that Mikhail Gorbachev had been demoted if another Politburo member had been the first to speak in the recent Central Committee meeting, equally the seating of Mr. Ortega conveys a very definite message: The Sandinist regime has been admitted to the very exclusive elub of governments that the Soviet Union regards as permanent, organic allies, A most basic Soviet doctrine is that once a fully fledged Leninist regime is estab-lished, there can be no backsliding, no reversion to democratic governance.

The irreversibility doctrine imposes demanding admission criteria. It requires the difficult assessment that a faraway exotic regime means to remain faithful to Moscow in all things, including military cooperation. Second, it demands an even chancier judgment that the regime has the determination and ability to remain in power. Third, it exposes the Soviet Union to risky out-of-area confrontations to protect the regime. Finally, it means that the Soviet Union will face demands for military and economic aid.

While Americans continue to argue over the sincerity of the Sandinist acceptance of the Arias peace plan, it seems that in Moscow the question is regarded as settled. Leninist governments can make all sorts of tain an unchallenged monopoly of power. If there were any suspicion that the Sandinists might actually allow the democratization required by the Arias peace plan, Mr. Ortega would not have been seared where he was. - Edward N. Lustwak, of the Center for Strategic and International Studies, writing in The Washington Post.

The National Conference of Catholie Bishops, in their useful statement on U.S. policy in Central America, had two lessons to teach the White House.

They are right when they argue that there can be no military solution and that U.S. support of the contras fighting the government of Nicaragua is "morally flawed."

Even more important, the bishops said what they said only after consulting the bishops of Central America, including Cardinal Miguel Ohando y Bravo, archbishop of Managua, and Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas of San Salvador, This was not, like so many initiatives of the Reagan administration, an arrogant assertion of Yankee authority on the Central Americans but, rather, a respectful response to the needs as seen by the Central Americans themselves.

Washington's preoccupation with Nicaragua, the bishops found, has two faults, converting Central Americans into "pawns in a superpower struggle" and failing to respond adequately to the human rights violations, corruption, unemployment and other miseries that have brought the region "to the very brink of devastation."

The bishops gave unqualified support to the Aug. 7 Central American peace agree-ment, "Let us turn our energies and resources in the region from supplying weapons of war to building instruments of peace," the bishops said. Amen.

The timing is appropriate because irresident Ronald Reagan's forthcoming meeting in Washington with Mr. Gorbachev, to sign an agreement with-drawing intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Europe, is viewed with considerable, if stilled, alarm among the European allies. Their concern is that this treaty will be followed by other nuclear cuts, eventually producing an effective end to U.S. nuclear deterrence that functions at any level of conflict short of direct threat to the United States itself.

Western Europe would then be left, or so it is said, to confront an overwhelming Soviet conven-tional military superiority. The U.S.S.R. would become "the incontestable military master of the continent," as a French commentator puts it. This which undoubtedly has been asked in Moscow.

Responses to Mr. Gorbachev's efforts to transform Soviet society vary greatly among three different groups of Muscovites: intellectuals, workers and upwardly mobile professionals. Critical-minded intellectuals with dissident connections appeared to be most philosophically supportive of the general secretary. I talked to several such people. None was a dissident in the strict sense of the word. All had comfortable jobs, and in a few instances even quite prestigious ones.

Nevertheless, everyone at a gathering I attended in a large (by Soviet standards) two-bedroom apariment had well deserved reputations for integrity - as well as a long record of getting into trouble with the authorities by refusing to toe the party line. Life is less onerous; in the summer heat, millions can aspire to the luxury of an electric fan. But with prosperity and a necessary relaxation of price controls has come inflation. The government ad-mits to about 5 percent, but some say it amouots to four times that. Soon a bankruptcy law will be passed, permit-ting uncompetitive businesses to fail. With free-market pricing comes the old business cycle, perhaps abetted by worldwide recession.

Would such a slump ignite a match in the gas-filled rooms of the party and the army? Nobody knows. Most of the peo-ple are still disgusted at the excesses of the Cultural Revolution, and the memory of those terrible days is an argument for stability. But the possibility that the system will revert to its pattern of regular upheavals cannot be set aside.

As a certified loogtime "foreign friend" with Nixonian associations, I advise a dose of political freedom to go with the economic loosening. Dissidents would be able to let off steam. But such a course is oot part of Mr. Deng's "pri-mary stage of socialism," Neither Beij-ing nor Moscow realizes that the pro-ductive profit motive gives rise to nobler yearnings, and that free-market production cannot long succeed without institutionalized political opposition.

remotest island in the world of insular notoriety. St. Helena, where Napoleon was sent off to rusticate, is a mere 1,200 miles (1,900 kilometers) from mainland Africa. Pitcairn is 3,000 miles from Latm America to the east, 3,000 miles from New Zealand to the west. South of Pitcaim is nothing - until you hit the Antarctic. John Adams arrived here in 1790, eight months after the mutiny headed by Fletcher Christian. They came from Tahio: nine mutineers, six Haitian men, 12 Haitian women.

In those days, the king pursued insubordinate servants more vigorously than we pursue our traitors. Adams & Co. came to Pitcairn because practically no one knew of its existence. It was remote, deserted (no Polynesian was left), equable in temperature, fertile with tropical fruit, small (two square miles) and inacessible sman (two square innes) and inacessible except to friendly visitors. Invading Bounty Bay might be compared to an amphibious operation up Niagara Falls. They came here and burned the Bounty to eliminate it from preying British eyes. Meanwhile, those of their companions who declined to leave Tahiti to go to Pitcairn were being brought back for trial in London. Three were hanged; a half-dozen were granted clemency because of ambiguous evidence. The point of those who went to Pitcairn was to get safely away until it all blew over.

Twenty-five years after the mutiny it did blow over, and the little colony at Pitcairn was told more or less officially that all was forgiven. At that point, after all, only John Adams was alive, his fellow mutineers having been, for the most part, murdered during one of Pitcairn's unruly spells. But mutiny-on-the-Bounty watchers were astonished at that point, even as everyone was astonished oo two subsequent occasions, when Pit-caimers simply declined to evaporate. In 1831, the whole colony moved to Tahiti, thinking this a reasonable thing to do; but lo, in a matter of months, suffering from homesickness, they mostly returned. And then again in 1856, resolving that 158 islanders threatened a population explosion that would overwhelm the resources of the little mountainous island, the entire colony packed off to Norfolk Island, north of New Zealand; but the same thing happened.

Barnaby Conrad, the writer and art-ist, wanted all his life to visit Pitcairn, but managed to coordinate passage only a year of two ago, spending a rapt cou-ple of days here. On bidding an islander who had befriended him goodbye, he said, "Maybe I'll see you oext year."

"No," was the sad reply, "people only come to Pitcairn once."

In the past few years the islanders have got themselves a dozen mountainnave got memserves a dozen mountain-climbing motor scooters, greatly reliev-ing the exchequer, because up until then there was only the single tax on firearms, and these are practically gone. Services are delayed because the islanders, exercising a little self-indulgence, are plying their modest wares, so modestly priced, aboard the visiting Sea Cloud, before returning to the island for church services.

At high-tea time they are all on board, four generations of islanders. They spend three happy hours, communicating their cheer. And, after sunset, they board their longboat — 80 percent of Pitcairn's population — and sing out their happy-melancholy farewell songs. The words and phrases used in Philadelphia will be echoed by Mr. Reagan in the weeks ahead.

The summit meeting oext month is different from Mr. Reagan's previous meetings with Mr. Gorbachev because it is the first to center on the expected signing of a major arms-control agree-ment. The White House staff is using the focus group comments to help structure a campaign for Senate ratification of the Intermediate ouclear forces treaty. According to many public-opinion polls, the agreement generally enjoys wide support among Americans. But the Philadelphia focus groups demonstrated to White House strategists that many people remain ignorant of the details of the treaty and that Mr. Reagan has plenty of room to influence their impress of it.

"We have an opportunity to develop the landscape, the playing field," said Thomas C. Griscom, the White House communications director, who is taking a leading role in the summit planning along with Lieutenant General Colin L. Powell, the national security adviser. Mr. Griscom and General Powell head Selling of the Summit: How White House Uses 'Focus Groups' words and language about problems," he summit script, despite such problems as the summit script, despite such problems as the collapse last Friday of plans for Mr. Gorbachev to address Congress. One of the surprising findings from the Philadelphia focus group was that the participants saw bule direct benefit from an arms agreement that eliminated medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Rather, they attached more significance to the treaty as a "first step" toward reducing the big intercontinental nuclear missiles with which each superpower could attack the other.

This view of the treaty was evident when the focus groups were asked which themes they felt were most compelling for the summit meeting. The highest score went to "First Step for Peace," which, according to the par-ticipants, was the most literal representaoon of how they felt. By contrast, the participants were ambivalent about "A Step in a New Direction." They were cool toward the theme "Little More Hope for the Human Heart."

The White House subsequently adopted the "first step" idea as the theme of the summit meeting. Io a symbolic twist to show that the treaty is not the culminaoon of the meeting, but rather a starting point, the document is to be signed on the second day of Mr. Gorbachev's meetiogs. rather than at the end, White House officials said.

Nixon Offered Arms Advice to U.S. and Soviets

Reuters

NEW YORK - Former Presi-dent Richard M. Nixon sought to broker a meeting and possibly an arms control deal between President Ronald Reagan and the Soviet leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Time magazine has reported.

Time obtained a 26-page confi-dential memorandum to Mr. Reagan in which Mr. Nixon reported that he had sought to persuade Mr. Gorbachev that he should do business with Mr. Reagan. The memorandum also tried to convince Mr. Reagan that he should seek a major strategic-arms deal.

Mr. Nixon wrote the memo after meeting with Mr. Gorbachev in Moscow in July 1986, Time said in its current issue.

Mr. Nixon told the Soviet leader that Mr. Reagan "could get Senate approval of any agreement he made." He added that failure to reach an agreement might make Mr. Reagan "a powerful critic."

"I don't believe anything I said during the conversation had a greater impact" on Mr. Gorbachev. Time quoted the memo as saying.

For Three Days El Salvador Stopped the Fighting and Began Shooting.

For the past three years, the fighting in El Salvador stopped on three separate Sundays so more than 250,000 children could be vaccinated in a Unicef initiated programme. This may sound an amazing feat, but it is only one example of how Unicef - by its apolitical nature - can help save thousands of children's lives.

As recently as 1983 only ten percent of children in the developing world were vaccinated against six of the top killer diseases; measles, whooping cough, tetanus, polio, tuberculosis and diphtheria. But now almost eighty developing countries throughout the world have joined Unicel's campaign for Universal Child Immunization by 1990. With this achievement, thousands of children who would otherwise die will have a chance to Universal Immunization is only one example of Unicef's commitment to the wellbeing of children in the developing world. In co-operation with local government partners. Unicef provides not only emergency relief, but material support, primary health care and education programmes which promote longrange community self-help. ordination. Francis Mande, the British minister for corporate and consumer affairs, called for continued meetings of an informal working group of securities regulators from 10 countries, who gathered for the first time in December 1986. • The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, aware of the growing globalization of trading, is exploring ways of broadening cooperation with securities regulators in countries where market supervision is considered lax. Last month, various central banks strengthened markets on three continents with an international safety net of cash and calm words. Despite these reassuring steps, there is concern that the global expansion of markets has increased risks and outpaced local supervision. 'You have global markets and global financial institutions with national standards and rules," said John G. Heimann, vice chairman of Merrill Lynch Capital Markets.

R. Heimann added that "if there's a lesson to be learned" from the market collapse, "it's that activity in L one market can reverberate and feed on other markets, so you must have forms of cooperation from those who oversee those markets."

International cooperation is not easy. Regulators disagree about who should supervise certain markets and about the extent and nature of regulation needed. Furthermore, attention in most countries is focused on local issues.

 Senator Donald W. Riegle Jr., Democrat of Michigan and chairman of the Banking Subcommittee on Securities, has asked the presidential committee studying the markets to consider whether an international regulatory body to oversee global finan-icid and the studying t cial markets should be created.

In last month's crisis, various central banks or their equivalents moved quickly to prevent the markets from seriously affecting the banking system. The role of central banks as guardians of the banking system is less obvious than their role of controlling the money supply and interest rates, regulators agree. In the United States, the Fed chairman, Alan Greenspan, issued a short but calming statement that the central bank would make funde available to sweet a run on the heating content.

Big Carriers Tighten Grip On Industry

By Agis Salpukas New York Times Service NEW YORK — When the U.S. airline industry was deregu-lated in 1978, the unfettered market was expected to give rise to scores of low-cost carriers that would create a bonanza for consumers, put the existing companies on the defensive and even run some of them out of business. But things have not turned out that way at all. In most cases, it has been the upstarts that failed,

And despite mergers that take away with such old-line carriers as National and Republic, many of the remaining airlines have become more powerful than ever.

Consumers, meanwhile, have been left with fewer choices and higher rates on some routes. In many cases, nonstop flights are no longer available. In the deregulated environment, airlines have concentrated on high-volume cit-ies. And many routes are now served by only one or two major carriers, which often results in higher fares. Because of mergers and the disappearance of so many upstart carriers, the large, established air-lines now control more than 90 percent of the traffic.

Indeed, there has been such a high failure rate among young carriers — including People Ex-press, once hailed as the very model of a successful, post-deregulation startup --- that many in the industry believe that the door to new entries is virtually shut.

Only two upstart airlines of any size remain, America West and Midway, and they see little prospect of others joining them.

FRANKFURT --- West Germany's leading economic experts pre-dieted Monday that economic growth would be tepid in 1988, but said they saw no indications of an impending recession. In a majority opinion, they offered no support for rising demands from the nation's major trading pariners for measures to stimulate the economy and help ease trade imbalances. One of the five experts dissented, urging more expansionist policies. In their annual report, the "Five Wise Men," an independent coun-cil af economists that advises Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservative government, said that West Germany's gross national product would expand by 1.5 percent in 1987 and 1988.

"We see no convincing reasons to suggest a recession is coming," the experts said, "The declines on the stock markets are not a crisis of the financial system." The report downplayed the dollar's recent weakness and predicted the U.S. currency would stabilize around 1.70 Deutsche marks in 1988.

The forecast contrasts with the The forecast contrasts with the government's official prediction of 2.25 percent GNP growth in 1988, and expansion of 1.5 to 2 percent this year. It was also well below the 2 percent GNP growth predicted by the nation's five leading economic research institutes in a report released in early November. Finance Minister Gerhard Stolenberg and Economics Minister Martin Bangemann, in a joint statement, called the experts' report too pessimistic.

Open System Architecture: the Olivetti solution

The backbone of Open System Architecture is the LSX 3000 computer family, a fully integrated line of minicomputers linking two to two hundred users. Olivetti built the family on a UNIX system foundation, which conforms to the UNIX System V and X/OPEN standards. These minicomputers run a host of applications software designed to satisfy the most complex needs. And naturally they continue to support MOS, the Olivetti operating system developed for specific market sectors.

Communications among systems is facilitated by a range of Olinet products meeting the ISO/OSI standard. With full connectibility to the PC world of MS-DOS and the corporate database, wherever it may be.

Olivetti is represented in all European, Far Eastern and Western countries. For further information about Olivetti systems please contact the Marketing Department of the Olivetti Head Office in your country.

can border will likely be sustained because of the latest plunge in the peso's value, industry officials here say. The number of plants in Ciudad Juarez, a city of one million people across the Rio Grande from El Paso, has more than doubled since the peso's slide began in 1982. Employment has tripled in the plants, to more than 100,000. The main reason is the cheap cost of labor. Minimum wage rates fell to about 60 cents an hour this week, well below comparable rates in Southeast Asia. Most plants in Mexico pay the minimum wage.

hour this week, well below comparable rates in Southeast Asia. Most plants in Mexico pay the minimum wage. The number of plants operated by American, Japanese, West German, British and other for-eign manufacturers has been rising. "Low wage rates attracted us to the Juarez area," said Harold Frecker, the managing direc-tor of a small plant operated as a joint venture by United Technologies Corp. of Hartford, Connecticut, and Furukawa Electric of Tokyo. The plant, which has 35 employees, began shipping wire assemblies two months ago to the Honda Motor Co. car production plant in Mar-ysville, Ohio. Furukawa has been a major sup-plier to Honda factories in Japan for years. Mr. Freeker said that United Technologies, which employs 3,200 workers at seven sites in Ciudad Juarez, and Furukawa hope that the low costs at the Juarez plant will enable them to win orders from other Japanese auto makers. Mexico's 1982 economic crisis, which was precipitated by low oil prices, led to a collapse of the peso, from 26 to the dollar to about 1,000 last February. The peso's slide had continued gradually to about 1,700 pesos until Wedines-day, when it plunged to around 3,000 at border exchange houses. By Friday it had stabilized around 2,500. Most analysts and executives at border fac-tories said the recent plunge in the peso will around 2,500. Most analysts and executives at border fac-tories said the recent plunge in the peso will prompt the government to raise the minimum wage before the year ends. Proponents of the shift to Mexican argue that the lower costs help American companies com-pete with foreign rivals and that most parts suppliers remain in the United States. William L. Mitchell, marketing vice president for Grupo Bermudez Industrial Park in Ciudad Inarez, said the number of plants in the United

Juarez, said the number of plants in the United Juarez, sau me number of plants in the Onited States supplying parts and raw materials to Mexican border plants rose to 14,159 last year, from about 6,000 in 1982. He estimated that the number of employees in the U.S. plants rose to 219,000, from 100,000, in the same period.

These assembly plants, known as maquila-doros, originated in Ciudad Juarez in 1965 when a local businessman, Jaime Bermudez Cuarón, developed a successful, American-style industrial park.

The venture gave birth to a new economy for Ciudad Juarez that has helped El Paso avoid the high unemployment that plagues most Texas border cities. The current rate in El Paso is 11 percent Since 1982, the number of maquiladoras in Since 1982, the number of maquinators in Mexico has increased to 1,400, from 380, ac-cording to Wayne E. McClintock, publisher of the Mexico Report in El Paso. Employment in the plants is close to 350,000, compared with 70,000 in 1982, he said.

A Life of Frank Lloyd Wright

By Brendan Gill. 544 pages. $24.95. The Putnam Publishing Group Inc., 200 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

Reviewed by Benjamin Forgey

T WENTY-EIGHT years after his death, in 1 an age of architectural stardom he helped to create, Frank Lloyd Wright remains the most famous American architect. Today, even more than during his lifetime, Wright's name is marketable; objects he designed, including buildings or parts of them, fotch ever-increasing prices at auction or in private sales; unexecuted plans he made are bought up and built. And, of course, his long and tumultuous hife ues to fascinate. contin

In this biography — informative, entertain-ing, gossipy, contentious, affectionate, irrever-ent and, ultimately, reverential — Brendan Gill brings Wight the man alive as no previous biographer has done. Gill, a long-time writer for The New Yorker magazine, first encoun-tered Wright in splendid old age, at a time when the architect was traveling constantly between the remarkable working retreats he had created — the Taliesins, east and west — the first encounter and citize security and to and from campuses and cities around the country. At the Taliesins Wright enjoyed his status as "resident deity," while in New York and elsewhere he relished his role as a York and elsewhere he relished his role as a "professional great man" — the last part among the many masks, Gill says, the architer had adopted to cultivate jobs, clients, admittrs and fame while shielding himself and his ex-ceptional talent from criticism, due and undue. Gill's portrait, though sympathetic, is un-flinching. The Wright that emerges from his scrutiny is, in the abstract, like Nietzsche's Superman — a passionate creator whose sift to scrutiny is, in the abstract, like Nietzsche's superman — a passionate creator whose gift to the world "far outweighs the persistent, outra-geous selfishness of the giver." Gill's Wright, amply put, is a genus; there's no other word to encompass his architectural achievements. But he also is a complex, vital, specific human being — "a virtuoso at bearing false witness . . a confidence man of infinite charm" who, "disconcertingly," turned out "to be as great as he said he was." Wright's antobiography, published initially in 1932 when he was 65 and almost hierarly out of work, and expanded for a second version of work, and expanded for a second version published in 1943, remains his great testament but, as Gill is not the first to point out, it is notoriously unreliable.

notoriously unreliable. Gill's work is, decisively, a life and not an architectural or intellectual history, though, since Wright is his subject, he thoroughly covers the architectural ground. He's opimonated — the Beth Shalom Synagogue near Philadelphia is the best of Wright's late works, he says, notwide-standing that it was built simultaneously with the Guggenheim Museum. He is insightful — Unity Temple, the strangely glorious early Wright church in Oak Park, owes a great deal to Joseph Maria, Olbrich and the turn-of-the-cen-Wright church in Oak Park, owes a great deal to Joseph Maria Olbrich and the turn-of-the-cen-tury Vienna Secession, he proves, notwithstand-ing Wright's protestations to the constrary. He is pointedly inteverent — "for all [Wright's] preaching to the contrary, he, too, often permit-ted his structures to dominate a landscape in-stead of accommodating to it." But for systematic interpretation of the ar-chitecture readers might want to turn to the chitecture readers might want to turn to the many specialized volumes. Gill's book, howev-er, fascinates in ways none of the others possibly can — reading it is like sitting down for a few evenings with a contrary, brilliant, extraor-dinary soul, and being mesmerized despite all.

In Tour Finale, Graf Has Her Just Desserts

By Peter Alfano New York Times Service

NEW YORK - There was an occasional sign of frustration as Steffi Graf muttered to herself in German, swatted a ball or two in annoyance and all but abandoned autempts to coax her backhand slice over the net. For one of the few times during a remarkable year, the 18year-old West German appeared vulnerable and the prospect of an Agatha Christie ending to the tennis season filled the air at Madison Square Gorden with anticipation Sunday.

For two sets, Graf labored against 17-yearold Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, her doubles partner. Sabatini was hitting the ball barder, moving more freely around the court and feeding off the support of the crowd. How sweet it would have been for Sabatini to beat her teenage rival - for the first time ever - in the tournament that Graf coveted more than any except Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

"For a while, I was getting angry," Graf said. "She wasn't playing bad and 1 was making mistakes. The audience was more for her, but 1 understand. She looks better, and she is the underdog."

And yet after two sets, the match was even. It is a measure of Graf's talent and determination is a measure of Oral s tatent and orter mination that she even seems to be in control during times of adversity. "After the second set," she said, "I knew I would win."

Graf added the final touch to an almost perfect season by winning her first Virginia Slims championship, 4-6, 6-4, 6-0, 6-4. She earned $125,000 and solidified her bold on the No. 1 ranking, which she took from Martina Navratilova this year.

Graf won 11 of 13 conmaments in 1987. among them the French Open, Her two losses were to Navratilova, in the finals of Wimbledon and the U.S. Open. She had a match record of 75-2, one that she acknowledged would be nearly impossible to duplicate.

"This was the biggest win I ever had," said Graf, who valued this championship more than #### the French Open title because it has an clite saving three break points in the second game of field — the top 16 players — and is played at the match, she broke three times to win the first the end of the year, when fatigue and injuries set. Graf said she even spent Saturday night trying to think of an analogy for her success in 1987, "I took long to fall asleep," she said, "so I thought about how I was going to describe my year. To me, it was like making a ment." Graf categorized her victories as appetizer, main course or dessert. This championship was part of dessert, she said, the part of a meal she likes best. "It was," she said, "a nice ending." But Sabatini made her work for it. After crowd cheered. Wearing a scowl and clenching her fist for inspiration, Sabatini appeared intent on breaking Graf's domination.

"I have said before that, at any moment, I can beat her," Sabatini said. "I am there, Maybe I just have to improve my physical conditioning a little."

Her goal, she said, was to win the first two sets, which would place a great deal of pressure ou Graf in the only women's match of the year with a best-of-five-set format. Sabatini was weary from more draining matches, especially an emotional semifinal victory over Navratilova.

A lack of stamina has been Sabarini's primary weakness thus far, providing the difference in her matches against Graf. She has lost all 11, although only one was a rout. While Graf attended a National Basketball Association game Saturday night, Sabatini was practicing at a local indoor club.

"I know she's going to get tired," Graf said. "I was trying to let her run a lot in the first set. She's had hard matches."

Sunday's turning point was in the 10th game of the second set, when Graf broke to even the match. Sabatimi's ninth double fault gave Graf her first set point. She appeared indecisive during the next rally, hitting a poor drop shot that Graf ran down and smacked crosscourt for a winner. Had Sabatini held serve in that game, she might still have eventually won the set. She was playing well enough.

Sabatini had mental and physical lapses that lasted one and a half sets. Graf won the third set, losing only nine points, and was ahead, 3-0, in the fourth, Sabatini's serve had fallen apart, a result of fatigue and the necessity to serve well against the best forehand in the women's game.

She had 17 double faults -- four coming on set points -- while Graf had only five. That was the difference between them Sunday.

David Simon, a Los Angeles attorney who worked for the 1984 Olympic organizing committee, said that American efforts to stage prestigious international events would be helped significantly by the creation of a federal officer or bureau to deal with sports.

"I'm not necessarily talking about money," Simon said. "We just need a place in the government where people can go for assistance. To have an event in this country, for a city to hold or bid on it, you need the help of the federal government to do the job." Currently, the highest-ranking government official with responsi-bilities in sports is Edward J. Der-D' winski, the undersecretary of state for security assistance, science and technology. But as his title sug-gests, he has several other areas of concern as well. North Korea will inform the International Olympic Committee by the end of the year whether it will take part in the 1988 Scoul Otympics, said Juan Antonio Samaranch, the IOC president. The deadline for countries to declare whether they will attend the Games is Jan. 17.

Primo Nebiolo of Italy, the president of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body of track and field, lost in a recent election to become president of the Italian Olympic Committee to Arrigo Gattaim, the head of the Italian ski federation. That loss could have deeper implications for him, in that it likely damages his chances of being elected to the IOC, a position he is known to covet.

Attorney General Ed Messe's role infimmate was questioned by the majority report. I take excep-tion to this. Messe's handling of the case was just right. He was neither too hard nor too soft on the suspects. One of the reasons people criticize Ed Meese is that he plays a twofold role in the administration and this gets confusing at times. I personally am perplexed because every time I see Meese enter a grand jury room I never know if he is there to testify for the government or himself.

As far as we know no crimes were committed during Irangate -except for perjury, misuse of gov-ernment funds, obstruction of justice, embezzlement, tax fraud, destruction of vital evidence and profiteering on military equipment. But since all of these crimes were done to save the Western world from going Communist, the special prosecutor should pack up and get the hell ont of Washington before

He's talking about "back-to-back triumphs." One was winning a suit against a Florida company for back royalties on the laser. And the other: "Last night I signed a licensing agreement [with a Long Island company] with a down payment of $1.2 million, which was a direct conse-quence of this trial in Florida," he says. "And others are being nego-

Corp. has a 64 percent interest in the Gould patents. Gould, a vice chairman of Patlex, has 20 percent of the rights to his patents, and his patents are worth about $75 million. He also has investments in venture capital projects and high-tech companies, and es-timates his worth from those at $3 Washington Post Service million to $4 million. "I'm worth ASHINGTON - Gordon WGould is the kind of person about $20 million," he says.

And because the laser business you look at and, knowing what he's been through, still say he's has become so widespread in the past few years, it's more hicrative none the worse for wear. Then for him to have his patents now than it would have been during again, maybe he created this con-tented persona to hide decades of the 1960s and early 1970s. "By a anger. He's frequently asked if he's bitter and he always smiles a factor of 20 to 30," Gould confirms

Perhaps that is because he is Earlier this month at a small presentation and press conference now a very rich man. It's not apin the National Press Building, parent that a patent struggle dat-ing back to 1957 has taken any visible toll on the 67-year-old Gould was awarded his latest laser patent (he has several now) for the gas discharge laser. It was 30 years ago that he ran Patlex officials praised Gould's "tenacity" and described how he "waged the fight" for his patent rights. And this is all true. But there's still pain and anger when he talks about the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

He was a graduate student in physics at Columbia (with an undergraduate degree in physics from Union College and a mas-ter's in physics from Yale), a tal-ented inventor (be holds 48 paients) when he conceived the laser in 1957 and had his notebooks notarized. However, he mistakenly believed he needed to have a working model before he could get a patent. "Of course, I was wrong," he says. "Ignorant. Totally ignorant in those days. I've learned a lot in the last 30 years."

The next year, 1958, Townes, then a Columbia professor who had seven years earlier invented the maser (microwave amplifica-tion by stimulated emission of radiation), wrote an article on the subject of lasers with his brotherin-law, the physicist Arthur Schawlow. It was the Townes-Schawlow team that received the first patent for a laser. (Townes is now a professor emeritus at the University of California at Berke-ley, and Schawlow is a professor at Stanford.) Gould's patent submission in to the public. "I was disappointed in myself because I had done this stupid thing of not simply sitting down and writing a patent application." Gould says. "If I had done that I would have had that first patent." It took 18 years for the patent office to consider Gould's various laser inventions and compare them with competing applica-tions. PEOPLE Japanese Donor Opens

Wing of Israeli Museum

A Japanese businessman, Ryo, di Sasakawa, inangurated a new-wing at the Felix Tikotine Japanese art museum in Haifa, Israel, that, was made possible through his donation of $1.5 million. At the mangural ceremony Sasakawa, 88, expressed his admiration "for Israel" and its people, who have so much, in common with the Japanese." The Tikotine Museum, which opened in 1959, is named for a Swiss collector of Japanese art who left his 6,000 piece collection to the Israeli city.

Robert Vadino, 49, of Waterford, faces three counts of writing bad checks totaling $179.55 to a phar-macy so he could buy nitroglycerin for his heart condition. Vadino's boax had been going on since 1983 and he had appeared on radio and television programs after convinc-ing producers he was the singer. It all came apart recently when he personaded a lawyer to file a $1.1million suit in Vee's name against an apartment complex. He eventually admitted that he had impersonated the singer both on stage and off without permission. . 0 Betty Ford is recovering from

In his last words to Bob Woodward, Casey said, "Irangate is nothing but a third-rate burglary and therefore I am not a crook." The key to the mystery is somewhere in that sentence if someone could just break the code. Admiral Poindexter's role has still not been resolved.
